EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

This report is an assessment of the overall environment of the off-cycle 2026 governorship election in Ekiti state¹. This was done by appraising the political economy, including the actors; INECs preparedness; the media landscape; participation of marginalised groups and election risks factors that could impact on the integrity, credibility and legitimacy of the election. The report, which integrates the information contained in the pre-election assessment undertaken by the implementing partners of the European Union Support for Democracy and Governance in Nigeria (EU-SDGN) programme, is complemented by information from other primary and secondary sources. The major highlights of the findings are as follows:

- There is a high possibility that the election will be peaceful based on the generally calm and positive situational outlook prevailing in the state. Most of the pre-election activities have so far been carried out without any serious security threat, breach of the peace or violence. However, the political economy of the state, with an increasing public disaffection over poor living conditions, may influence voter turnout and encourage vote trading.
- The general perception in the State is that the election will not be competitive due to the residual advantage of incumbency and elite consensus among major actors in the ruling and opposition parties in favour of the sitting governor; resource disequilibrium between the ruling party and the opposition parties, as well as internal contradictions and leadership crisis within opposition parties. However, litigations on contested outcomes of party primaries and nomination of candidates and a general feeling of apathy and detachment by the general public might impact on the electioneering process.
- The unresolved issues and tensions within the political parties, including the ruling party as a result of the fall-out from the party primaries and candidate nominating process has led to various litigations as the aggrieved candidates are seeking redress albeit through established institutional processes and without recourse to self-help or instigating violence. The unpredictable outcome of these litigations could still alter the list of candidates for the election.
- The National Supervising Commissioner and INEC officials in the state, especially the Resident Electoral Commissioner (REC), Administrative Secretary, Head of Electoral Operations and other department are tried and tested hands with requisite knowledge and field experience and should be able to organise the operational and logistics requirements for the conduct of a hitch free election, barring any unforeseen circumstances and influence relationship. Although the State Office have successfully accomplished some of the pre-election activities, the pursuit and implementation of the outstanding ones are contingent on the early release of election funds.

- The security environment in the state is calm and peaceful with no reported case of any serious breach of the peace or negative activities by armed non-state actors since November 2025. The Nigerian Police Force as the lead agency in election security in collaboration with other security and law enforcement agencies are currently carrying out preventive security measures across the State and has already drawn up the operational order 08/2026 with the requisition of 9,780 conventional and 25 units of
- mobile policemen to provide a secure environment for the conduct of the election. The required number of security personnel must be mobilised and deployed in good time to secure the election.
- Many electoral stakeholders, including the INEC State Office, National Orientation Agency (NOA), civil society and community-based organisations (CSOs/CBOs), the media, traditional rulers and religious leaders are promoting civic engagement on the electoral process and undertaking voter education and sensitisation activities to reinforce the message on the need for peaceful elections and active participation by all eligible voters.

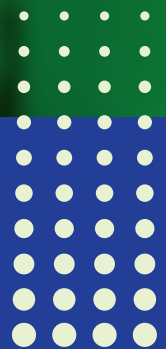

Despite the positive outlook, there are many risk factors that are capable of triggering electoral violence and therefore affect the integrity, credibility and legitimacy of the election. Some of these factors are rooted in the history and political economy of elections in Ekiti State. Perhaps the most notable risk factor is the predictable reaction of indigenes of the state to any attempt to undermine the electoral process or tamper with the outcome of the election, either through logistics failure, organisational lapses, unprofessional conduct by the electoral and security personnel or compromise of the process by the election officials. Other risk factors include cross border attacks; incitement of primordial sentiments among warring communities through the use of hate speeches and dissemination of fake news, misinformation and disinformation, agitation for power rotation/sharing by politician and citizens from the Ekiti South Senatorial District who feels a sense of marginalisation; fallout from the party primaries and nomination of candidates for National and State Assembly elections and disregard of the political interest of the powerful godfathers, militarisation and politicisation of election security and use of force or other draconian measures to curb vote trading.

Strategies for mitigating the identified risks include observance of internal democracy and adherence to the extant provisions of the electoral legal framework by the political parties, adequate preparation and commitment by INEC to conduct a free, fair and transparent election, consultations by the National Peace Committee with key political actors and continued engagements with all relevant stakeholders, confidence building measures with citizens by CSOs/CBOs to promote peaceful and violence free electioneering, conflict sensitive reporting by the media, adequate provision of election security and professional conduct by the security personnel on election duty.

INTRODUCTION

1.1 Overview

Ekiti state, located in the Southwest geopolitical zone of Nigeria with Ado-Ekiti as the capital city and known as the "Land of Honour and Knowledge" or "Fountain of Knowledge", shares a common border with Kwara State to the North, Kogi State to the North-East, Ondo State to the South and South-East and Osun State to the West. The State was created out of the old Ondo State by the military regime of General Sani Abacha on 1st October 1996. The State has a land area of 6,353km and an estimated population of over 4.1 million people across the 16 Local Government Areas in 2023² (Table One), It is one of the most homogeneous states in Nigeria, both culturally and linguistically. It has 16 Local Government Areas (LGAs) (Table Two), 22 Local Council Development Areas (LCDAs), 177 Ward/Registration Areas (RAs) and 2445 Polling units (PUs) (see Annexure 1). The electoral map comprises of one governorship constituency comprising the entire state (Table Two), three Senatorial Districts (Table Three), six Federal Constituencies (Table Three) and 26 State Constituencies (Table Four). The total number of registered voters in the State for the 2023 General Election was 987,647, comprising of 485,396 male (49.1%) and 502,251 female (50.9%) (Table Nine). The number of registered voters that collected their Permanent Voters Card (PVC) for the election was 958,052 (97%). The State is mainly upland, rising to over 250 meters above sea level and it is characterised by an undulating landscape and metamorphic rocks with a vegetation ranging from tropical thick forests in the South to savannah grassland in the Northern boundaries. The farthest INEC LGA office to the State Office in Ado-Ekiti is Omuo, the capital of Ekiti East LGA and it is about 85 kilometres away. Getting there will take over two hours of travel, given the uneven topography and terrain, undulating roads and the raining season weather conditions (Table Five).

1.2 Electoral History

Since the creation of Ekiti State in 1996, it has been governed by a mix of military and democratically elected Governors, Acting Governors and a Civilian Administrator. The list of Governors, Acting Governors and the Civilian Administrator that have presided over the affairs of the State since the return to democratic governance in May 1999 are as listed in Table Six:

TABLE SIX: LIST OF GOVERNORS, ACTING GOVERNORS AND ADMINISTRATORS 1999 - DATE

NAME	POSITION	TENURE	PARTY	REMARKS
Otunba Niyi Adebayo	Governor	29/05/1999 – 29/05/2003	Alliance for Democracy (AD)	First and only term as Governor
Mr. Ayo Fayose	Governor	29/05/2003 – 19/10/2006	Peoples' Democratic Party (PDP)	First term as Governor but was impeached by the State Assembly on 16/10/2006. He was briefly replaced by Speaker Aderemi whose tenure was later declared illegal by the Federal Government
General Tunji Olurin (Rtd)	Administrator	19/10/2006 – 27/04/2007	Peoples' Democratic Party (PDP)	Olurin was appointed as Administrator by President Obasanjo following a declaration of state of emergency in the State by the Federal Government
Chief Tope Ademiluyi	Acting Governor	27/04/2007 – 29/05/2007	Peoples' Democratic Party (PDP)	Ademiluyi became Acting Governor following the termination of the state of emergency in the State
Engr Segun Oni	Governor	29/05/2007- 17/02/2009	Peoples' Democratic Party (PDP)	Oni was declared winner of the April 2007 election but was removed by Court of Appeal, Ilorin based on illegal returns in the election. The Court ordered a partial re-run election in 10 out of the 16 Local Councils in the State
Rt. Hon. Tunji Odeyemi	Acting Governor	06/05/2009 – 06/05/2009	Peoples' Democratic Party (PDP)	He became Acting Governor when the Court of Appeal, Ilorin, nullified Segun Oni's election and ordered a re-run election.
Engr Segun Oni	Governor	29/05/2009 - 16/10/2010	Peoples' Democratic Party (PDP)	Oni was reinstated after purportedly winning the re-run election, but was ultimately removed by the Court of Appeal in Ilorin which declared Fayemi as the rightful winner of the election
Dr. John Kayode Fayemi	Governor	16/10/2010 – 16/10/2014	All Progressive Congress (APC)	First Term as Governor

Mr. Ayodele Fayose	Governor	16/10/2014 – 16/10/2018	Peoples' Democratic Party (PDP)	Second Term as Governor
John Kayode Fayemi	Governor	16/10/2018 – 16/10/2022	All Progressive Congress (APC)	Second Term as Governor
Abiodun Abayomi Olujimi	Governor	16/10/2022 – Date	All Progressive Congress (APC)	First Term as Governor

As earlier stated, the Governorship election in Ekiti State is outside the normal General Election cycle as a result of the termination of the tenure of Engr. Segun Oni by the Court of Appeal, Ilorin, which in October 2010 declared Dr. Kayode Fayemi the rightful winner of the 10th April 2009 rerun election across 10 LGAs. At that time, the Court of Appeal was the final arbiter for Governorship election petition and the case was one of the major reasons for the subsequent amendment of Section 285 of the 1999 Constitution, which now allows petitions on Governorship election to go all the way to the Supreme Court. The last governorship election in the State was held on 18th June 2022 and the outcome is as shown in Table Seven.

1.3 Significance of the 2026 Governorship Election

The Ekiti State off-cycle Governorship election is the seventh such election since the inauguration of Nigeria's fourth republic on 29th May 1999. It is also second to the second-to-last off-cycle governorship election before the conduct of a General Election, and this is significant for many reasons. First, as was the case in 2022, it is the first election to be governed by the new Electoral Act 2026, thereby providing INEC, political parties and all electoral stakeholders the opportunity to test the implementability of some of the key provisions of the new Act. Such provisions are contained in Clauses 33, 60, 62, 63 and 84 on political parties changing candidates, counting of votes and forms, post-election procedures and collation of election results, rejection of ballot paper without official mark and nomination of candidates by parties. Specifically, it is important for INEC to test-run the functionality of newly introduced technological innovations, including the electronic transmission of election results. Furthermore, as the election is being conducted seven months to the 2027 General Election, it will provide all electoral stakeholders an insight into the organisational, operational and logistics preparations for the election and the possibility for addressing and mitigating identified lapses before the election.

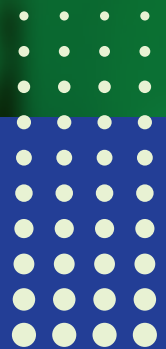

1.4 Methodology of the Pre-Election Assessment

This report is produced using a mixed-research methodology, involving the collection, analysis and integration of both quantitative and qualitative data. By doing this, the report provides a consistent, complete, corroborative and comprehensive understanding of the pre-election environment for the 20th June 2026 Ekiti State off-cycle Governorship election. The report is generated by synthesising and integrating the salient points in the pre-election assessment undertaken by the Kukah Centre (TKC), TAF Africa, the Nigerian Women Trust Fund (NWTF), Yiaga Africa, the International Press Centre (IPC) and the Centre for Media and Society (CEMESO). It was further enriched by the data and information obtained during a field trip to Ekiti and from the review and analyses of relevant secondary documents and digital sources to complement, validate and expand the scope and depth of the findings contained in the report from EU-SDGN partners. During the field trip to Ekiti, key informant and focus group discussions were held with key electoral stakeholders in charge of election management and election security, as well as with party officials and other stakeholders including religious and community leaders, the media and representatives of selected CSOs. Based on pre-engagement agreement with these stakeholders, the report did not make any direct attribution to any individual or group in order to maintain confidentiality of sources.

KEY FINDINGS

2.1 POLITICAL AND SOCIO-ECONOMIC CONTEXT

2.1.1 Political and Socio-Economic Conditions

Ekiti State is primarily agrarian and one of the less-developed states in Nigeria. It depends largely on monthly allocation from the federation account³ to meet its statutory recurrent and capital expenditure⁴. With literacy rate estimated at 95.8% of the population, the State has third highest literacy rate in Nigeria and recognised by UNICEF for having a 97% literacy rate among girls and women aged between 15-24 years old. It is also reputed to have produced the highest number of Professors per capita in Nigeria. The State's 2025 appropriation bill estimated at N375.8 trillion, with a recurrent/capital expenditure ratio of 51:49 focuses on food security, wealth creation, basic education, primary health care infrastructural development.

2.1.2 Political Parties, Candidates, Manifestos and Campaigns

The 20th June 2026 Ekiti state off-cycle governorship election will be contest by 13 candidates sponsored by various political parties. The political party and candidates as shown in Table Eight.

SOURCE: INEC

The ruling All Progressives Congress (APC) is the strongest political party in Ekiti State, with the incumbent Governor Abiodun Oyebanji as its candidate for the election. Before becoming Governor in October 2022, Governor Oyebanji held several key positions in the State including Special Assistant on Parliamentary Affairs and Chief of Staff to Governor Niyi Adebayo and Commissioner for Investment, Industry and Commerce and Secretary to the State Government (SSG) under Governor Fayemi. His campaign manifesto is anchored on "The Shared Prosperity Agenda" focusing on i) Continuity and consolidation with the objective of "breaking the second-term jinx" in Ekiti to ensure that ongoing infrastructure and policy projects are not abandoned; ii) Economic growth and job creation aimed at expanding the agricultural value chain and wealth generation; iii) Infrastructure development for the completion of the various road projects and urban renewal initiatives; iv) Human capital development with emphasis on education and healthcare.

The 57-member APC and Governor Oyebanji's Re-election Campaign Council in the State is led by Senate Leader, Senator Opeyemi Bamidele and consists of an Advisory Council co-chaired by former governors Niyi Adebayo and Dr. Kayode Fayemi. The APC National Campaign Committee is chaired by the Kaduna State Governor, Uba Sani and comprises many sitting Governors and high-ranking party officials. It is charged with providing strategic national oversight and maintaining party unity for the election. The Committee formally flagged off Governor Oyebanji's re-election campaign in Ado-Ekiti on Monday, 27th April 2026 and it was attended by the Governors of Imo, Kogi, Edo and Ondo States as well as former Governors Adebayo and Fayemi. It is interesting to note that Ex-Governor Fayose was at the rally and he reaffirms his membership of the PDP but declared his support for Oyebanji's re-election, stating that opposition politics in the state would resume after the Governorship election.

Although Governor Oyebanji is the APC candidate for election, there is some internal rumbling within the party arising from the alleged truncation of the governorship ambition of Engineer Kayode Olubunmi Ojo (EKO) whose supporters accused the party leadership and Heads of security agencies in the State of harassment, unlawful arrests, intimidation and undue pressure. This schism is further exacerbated by the fallout from the ongoing attempt to impose consensus candidates in the nomination for seats in the National and State Assembly. For example, there are speculations that former Governor Fayemi is interested in contesting against the incumbent Oluwole Fasuyi for the Ekiti North Senatorial District while there is simmering disaffection in the contest for the Irepodun/Ifelodun State Consistency II between the former Deputy Speaker, Hakeem Jamiu and the son of Ex-Governor Fayose who has been purportedly adopted as candidate by the Party leaders.

The PDP candidate is Dr. Oluwole Oluyede who is an Australian-based medical doctor from Ikere-Ekiti. Although he is a popular candidate within the party, his candidature is confronted with serious internal party dispute and trapped within the leadership crises and persisting internal party factionalism of the party between two contending forces. He is said to be aligned with the Aminu Turaki-led faction of the party, while the State Chairman, Lanre Omolase is aligned with the Nyesom Wike led group. Consequently, the PDP in the state refused to recognise his candidature demanding that he aligns openly with the Wike faction. When he refused to do so, his nomination was rejected by the Wike faction and his name was subsequently omitted from the list of candidates by INEC. It eventually took him several legal battles and the judgement of the Court of Appeal in March 2026 to set aside his disqualification by a Federal High Court. Following the Court ruling that INEC must recognise and list him as a candidate in the election, he launched his manifesto which is centred on a rescue mission agenda to reverse the economic decline through economic revitalization and agriculture, infrastructure development, healthcare reform, education and human capital development, governance and security. Despite this judicial restoration of Oluyede candidature, the internal divisions within the PDP remain a stumbling block to his ability to embark on effective campaign and voter mobilisation through rallies.

Other candidates in the election include Dare Bejide of the ADC who was a former a former Nigerian High Commissioner to Canada and Secretary to the State Government; Opeyemi Falegan, of Accord and Prof. Oyebanji Olajuyin of Labour Party among others. Realising their limitation in the contest against Governor Oyebanji, they are proposing to form a Rainbow Coalition with the primary objective of challenging the ruling APC. One of the rallying points of the proposed coalition is the need to address the alleged marginalization of Ekiti South Senatorial District based on the fact that the zone has never occupied the governorship position since 1999. The coalition is reportedly working to adopt the PDP candidate, Dr. Oluyede the PDP candidate who is from the zone as a consensus opposition candidate based on his popular appeal and perception that he is capable of defeating the incumbent Governor. However, progress at forming a coalition has been slow and the efforts is reportedly hindered by the lack of any visible rallying point like charismatic and voluble former Governor Fayose to lead the charge. The contest is therefore devoid of the traditional competitiveness that have characterised the previous elections and it is widely considered as a one-man race in favour of the incumbent Governor. By and large, as a result of internal crises, weak structures and lack of resources, there seems to be no visible political activity or campaign on the part of opposition parties.

2.1.3 Electoral Stakeholders

The electoral process in Ekiti State is shaped by a broad range of stakeholders whose roles, interactions and conduct will significantly influence the credibility, inclusiveness and peacefulness of the Governorship election. These stakeholders operate within a relatively stable environment but are constrained by structural, institutional and resource-related challenges that require careful coordination and sustained engagement. At the centre of the electoral process is the Independent National Electoral Commission (INEC), which is constitutionally mandated to organise, undertake and supervise elections. The Ekiti State Office is led by an experienced Resident Electoral Commissioner and supported by seasoned administrative and operational personnel with demonstrated capacity in managing electoral processes. The Commission has commenced key preparatory activities, including voter registration, stakeholder consultations and logistics planning. However, its effectiveness is currently constrained by delayed funding, infrastructural deficiencies and limited scale of voter education and stakeholder engagement, which may impact overall preparedness if not urgently addressed. Next critical stakeholder is the security and law enforcement agencies with the Nigerian Police Force as lead agency. The existing security architecture in the State within the ambit of the Inter-Agency Consultative Committee on Election Security (ICCES) in the State has facilitated coordination among members provides a framework for ensuring a secure electoral environment, including the development of Operation Order 08/2026 and planned deployment of personnel. Nonetheless, concerns persist regarding the potential for politicisation, perceived bias and excessive use of force, which could undermine public trust if not carefully managed. Another critical stakeholder in the electoral process are the political parties and candidates. While the ruling party maintains a dominant position, reinforced by incumbency advantage, organisational strength and elite consensus, the opposition parties are weakened by internal divisions, leadership crises, resource constraints and ongoing litigations arising from party primaries and candidate nomination. While disputes are largely being addressed through institutional mechanisms, the fragmentation within opposition parties has reduced the competitiveness of the election and may contribute to voter apathy. At the same time, political actors retain the capacity to either promote peaceful engagement or escalate tensions through their rhetoric and conduct.

Other stakeholders include Civil society organisations (CSOs), Community-based organisations (CBOs) who play an important role in promoting voter education and civic engagement, as well as traditional rulers and religious leaders who remain influential actors in shaping public opinion and promoting social cohesion. These stakeholders have been actively engaged in sensitisation campaigns, advocacy and stakeholder dialogue and the promotion of peace advocacy, voter sensitisation and community mobilisation. However, the impact of the CSOs/CBOs is moderated by resource limitations and the scale of outreach required, particularly in contributing to the maintenance of peace and stability in the rural communities, while the neutrality and commitment of the traditional rulers and religious leaders to peaceful electoral conduct will be critical in mitigating tensions, especially at the grassroots level.

The media constitutes a powerful stakeholder within the electoral environment and Ekiti State has a vibrant mix of federal, state-owned and private broadcast and print media, complemented by an increasingly influential digital and social media space. While the media serves as a key platform for voter education, political communication and public discourse, it is also characterised by editorial bias in publicly owned outlets, commercial pressures in private media and the proliferation of misinformation, disinformation and unregulated content online. These dynamics present both opportunities and risks for the electoral process and to an electorate that is highly literate and politically aware. While the electorate in Ekiti are historically responsive and assertive in defending electoral integrity, current trends indicate growing apathy and disengagement, driven by perceptions of predetermined outcomes, economic hardship and distrust in political actors. This creates both a risk of low turnout and a potential for strong reactions in the event of perceived irregularities.

In summary, the electoral stakeholder landscape in Ekiti State is diverse and active, with each group playing a distinct but interdependent role. The effectiveness of these stakeholders in delivering a credible election will depend on their adherence to legal and ethical standards, the strength of coordination mechanisms and their collective commitment to transparency, inclusiveness and peaceful democratic processes. The ability of development partners to provide technical, financial and advisory support in strengthening institutional capacity and supporting the activities of these stakeholders will contribute to the overall integrity and enhance the transparency of the election.

2.2 INEC PREPARATIONS AND READINESS ASSESSMENT

The Resident Electoral Commissioner in Ekiti State is Dr. Olubunmi Omoseyindemi from Lagos State who was appointed to the position in October 2023. Before then, he was a member of Lagos State Independent Electoral Commission (LASIEC) from 2016 to 2021 and after assuming duty in the State has conducted a number of bye-elections and participated as supporting REC in many bye-elections and off-cycle governorship elections across the country. The Administrative Secretary is Mr. Tope Aina, who has extensive field experience in the conduct of elections. Between then, the eight Heads of Department and Units and the other staff in the INEC State Office in Ekiti, they should be capable of conducting a good election, barring any unforeseen circumstances.

2.2.1 Continuous Voter Registration

The register of voters is at the heart of any democratic election. It is therefore a standard practice for INEC to undertake the Continuous Voter Registration preparatory for an off-cycle election with the exception of Bayelsa and Kogi which is conducted in year of a General election.

Consequently, the CVR exercise for the Ekiti election commenced online alongside the Phase One of the general registration on 18th August 2025, while the physical or in-person registration commenced on 25th August 2025 in the 16 Local Government Area (LGA) offices of INEC in the State. Thereafter, the registration was devolved to the 177 Registration Areas in the State for 10 days from 16th to 25 February 2026. At the close of the Phase Two of the exercise on 18th April 2026, Ekiti State recorded 32,475 completed online and physical registration. The names and details of the newly registered voters have been displayed for claims and objections and subjected to the synchronisation and deduplication process to remove ineligible registrants. Thereafter, the PVC for the eligible registrants will be printed and made available for collection from 21st to 25th May 2026. The register of voters for the elections comprising the already existing registered voter as shown in Table Eight and the new registrants will be displayed in all the 2445 polling units on 20th May 2026.

2.2.2 Civic and Voter Education and Stakeholders Engagements

In preparation for the election, the State Office has commenced voter sensitisation and public enlightenment programmes across the State through the electronic media. The Office also organises regular consultative meetings of the Inter agency Consultative Committee on Election Security co-chaired by the REC and the State Commissioner of Police, embarked on public outreach, including advocacy visits to various traditional rulers and religious leaders and regular engagements and sensitisation programmes with various CSOs and religious organisations and commenced discussions with the road transport unions for the hiring of vehicles for the movement of election personnel and materials. Despite the best of efforts by the State and LGA offices, the scope and latitude of civic and voter education and enlightenment as well as the frequency of ICCES meetings and engagement with relevant stakeholders remain low due to paucity of resource as the State Office is yet to receive funding to undertake necessary voter enlightenment and stakeholder engagement activities.

2.2.3 Electoral Infrastructure and Logistics

In terms of readiness assessment of election infrastructure and logistics preparations, the election preparedness summary report by the Election Monitoring and Support Centre show that the state of election preparedness across the 16 INEC Local Government Offices is at 34% as of 14th April 2026 as shown in Annexure Three. The State office has also carried out an assessment of the availability, suitability and operational readiness of 210 RAC, LGA and State Collation Centres (Annexure Three). The electoral and general store in the State and LGA offices have also been decongested and obsolete materials evacuated in readiness for the receipt and storage of sensitive and non-sensitive election materials. Furthermore, the evaluation of the operational vehicles and BVAS inventory has been carried out to determine their functionality, while there has been network mapping of the State to determine the most effective communication network. The outcome revealed that most of the operational vehicles are in a state of disrepair and non-functional and there is adequate number of BVAS and SIM cards for the purpose of accreditation and upload of election results to the IReV. Lastly, the State and most of the LGA offices are in a dilapidated state with leaking roofs and deteriorating physical structures that will require urgent renovation and rehabilitation for the purpose of the election.

2.2.4 Recruitment and Training

The ad-hoc personnel required for the conduct of the election is estimated at 11,000 comprising of Presiding Officers, Assistant Presiding Officers, Supervisory Presiding Officers, as well as Ward and LGA Collation Officers and the State collation and returning officer. The process for recruitment of these ad-hoc staff through the INEC PRESS portal is currently ongoing and their training is scheduled to commence on 27th May 2026. This will involve the technical training for Electoral and Assistant Electoral officers, the Ad-hoc election duty staff, including Supervising Presiding, Presiding, Assistant Presiding and Collation Officers on the effective management of the election. It is however important that enough time and resources is devoted to these trainings and ensure they do not clash with any other electoral activities to ensure that all election duty officials are effectively trained to provide them with adequate knowledge and understanding of their roles and responsibilities in the conduct of the election. By and large, preparations for the conduct of the election is ongoing, but there is need to ensure the prompt release of the election fund to the State to commence critical pre-election activities. Such activities includes the rehabilitation and renovation of the State and LGA offices and collation centres, repair of operational vehicles, upscaling civic and voter education and public enlightenment, more regular consultative meetings of ICCES and engagement with relevant electoral stakeholders, securing of training venues, clearing, fumigation and activation of RACs etc. There is also the need to ensure adequate preparations for the collection of PVCs, printing of the voter register, configuration of the BVAS, receiving, batching and distribution of sensitive and non-sensitive election materials, and transportation of election personnel and materials.

2.3 THE MEDIA LANDSCAPE

2.3.1 Overview of the Media Landscape

The Ekiti State media landscape comprises both the traditional radio and TV broadcasting and Online news medium, as well as an unregulated digital and social media ecosystem as shown in Table Ten. The radio/tv stations include NTA and Progress 100.5FM Ado-Ekiti owned by the Federal Government, the state-owned Ekiti 91.5 FM and EKTU and satellite-based National TV Networks such as Channels TV, Arise, AIT, TVC and News Central. The private radio stations comprises of Voice 89.9 FM, Ayoba 95.1 FM, Fresh 106.9 FM, Ebi-Nla 102.3 FM, Fly 104.9 FM, Sunsplash 99.7 FM, News Cruise 92.7 FM, Adamimogo 107.7 FM, BOUESTI 96.3 FM, Midas 90.5 FM, Our People's 104.1 FM, EKSU FM and ABUAD 88.1FM. The Radio and TV stations is complemented by a robust digital and social media platforms like WhatsApp, X (formerly Twitter), Facebook, Instagram and blogs. (Table Nine) While the federal and state-owned media are constrained by certain structural vulnerabilities such as operational dependence on the government, leading to lack of editorial independence and self-censorship, the private radio stations and digital platforms provides the primary battleground for intellectual and political discourse, a potent outlet for local influencers and groups to wield significant power in shaping public opinion, dissemination of news on local governance, community disputes and traditional institution and spreading of fake new, misinformation and disinformation. Radio broadcast is the most widespread medium public enlightenment reaching deep into the rural communities. The morning talk shows on the private radio stations and the active Ekiti-focused social media communities are perceived to be the most reliable barometer for gauging public sentiment.

SOURCE: IPC/CEMESO (2026) Assessment of Journalists’ Safety and Press Freedom Risks in Ekiti State towards the 2026 Off-Cycle Governorship Election

2.3.2 Media Access and Coverage

Section 99(2-5) of the Electoral Act 2026 states that State apparatus, including the media shall not be employed to the advantage or disadvantage of any political party or candidate, guarantees equal access, coverage, schedule and airtime to all political parties and candidates and prohibits the denial of airtime or space to a candidate by any public medium, provided they are willing to pay the requisite fees. These provisions of the Electoral Act are more often than not undermined in Ekiti State by the ruling party through the use of the power of incumbency with no known consequences whatsoever. Theoretically, airwaves are supposedly available to all political parties and candidates, but the reality is that of the dominance of the ruling party and its candidate in all the Federal and State-owned media outlets, under the direct editorial oversight of the Minister/Commissioner for Information. This control is also evident in the attempt to restrict the visibility of opposition candidates by the imposition of a prohibitive amount of ₦5 million campaign signage levy introduced by the Ekiti State Signage and Advertisement Agency for any political party or candidate to place billboards or paste banners and posters anywhere in the State. Although this levy is described as a regulatory measure by the Agency, it is evidently targeted at the smaller opposition parties and candidates with limited resources. Consequently, only the billboards, banners and posters of the APC and its candidate are displayed and visible across all strategic locations and public places in the State. The billboards, banners and posters of opposition parties and candidates can only be found pasted in their party offices and the residence of the candidates and their ardent supporters.

2.3.3 Safety of Media Workers

The risk assessment matrix by the International Press Centre (IPC) and Centre for Media and Society (CEMESO) identifies three probable threats to media workers in the run-up and during and immediately after the Ekiti off-cycle governorship election. These are physical violence, legal harassment, and selfensorship. In terms of physical violence, media workers may be subjected to harassment and assaults by opposing political parties and partisan actors at campaign events and venue of electoral activities. In some instances, they can suffer arrest, confiscation of their work tools or be compelled to delete “offensive” footages by security personnel at polling units and collation centres when documenting irregularities. The brutalisation and arrest of one Omoniyi Feranmi for attempting to document vote trading activities at a polling unit with the connivance of the security forces in the 2022 Ekiti election is a case in point. Legal harassment using the instrumentality of the Cybercrimes Act, defamation provisions in the Criminal Code and some provisions of the Electoral Act 2026, such as Clause 100 and 101, as well as in the Nigeria Broadcasting code constitute other possible channels of threat to the safety of the media, especially on-line journalists. The case of Dele Farotimi who was forcefully arrested in Lagos and transported to Ado-Ekiti against his will to be charged with cybercrime is cited as evidence that the judiciary can be used to silence online journalists covering Ekiti political affairs, regardless of their geographic location. The last identifiable threat is self-censorship through the use of economic and/or psychological pressure and it is exerted by exploiting the economic vulnerability of both the public and media organisations through the withdrawal of State subvention and direct editorial direction from proprietors citing the need to maintain cordial relationships with the government.

In the assessment of both IPC and CEMESO, continued and persistent impunity for attacks and violations against journalists and weak institutional preparedness poses a major risk to independent and credible media coverage of the election. This is typified in the absence of accountability for past violations, limited access to protective equipment and secure communication tools, lack of safety training and emergency protocols and weak local fact-checking capacity which makes journalists to be vulnerable to intimidation, digital threats and misinformation. They therefore called for deliberate investment in the safety of journalist and the provision of digital security, fact-checking capacity and institutional support systems to promote balanced and conflict-sensitive reporting before, during and after the election.

2.4 PARTICIPATION BY WOMEN, YOUTHS AND PwDs IN THE ELECTORAL PROCESS

2.4.1 Contextual Analyses

With an estimated population of 4.4 million in 2025, Ekiti State is one of the most densely populated in Nigeria. The population is evenly distributed between male and female as aptly reflected in the register of voters which is composed of 485,396 (49.15%) male and 502,251 (50.85) female for the 2023 General Election. A sizable portion of this population are under the age of 30 years with an estimated 12% are living with one form of disability or another. The State electoral environment is unique within Nigeria’s broader democratic landscape with the existence of the Ekiti State Political Offices (Gender Composition) Law, 2022, which establishes a 35%–65% gender balance principle for appointive positions. The law is a clear demonstration of the State’s commitment to gender inclusion and sets a normative benchmark for representation. However, there is a distinction between the intent and applicability of the law in a situation where the enforcement is non-binding. The political history of Ekiti State therefore reveals a consistent pattern of high women engagement in the electoral process as voters and community mobilisers, but they are faced with barriers in the contest for candidacy to party leadership and elective positions where power resides. Consequently, while women are not excluded at the point of entry into politics, they are progressively constricted in the contest for positions of political power and influence. Nevertheless, the State is one of the more progressive examples of women's political inclusion in Nigeria with women currently occupying visible positions in both the executive and legislative arms of government. For example, it has a female Deputy Governor and at the level of the Executive, the Secretary to the State Government and Head of the civil service are women and four of the 23 members of the State Executive Council are also women. Furthermore, six out of the 26 members of the State Assembly are women with three of them holding leadership positions of Deputy Speaker, Chief Whip, and Deputy Chief Whip, reflecting some level of participation and influence in institutional decision-making spaces.

Ekiti State has a formidable youth population with young people between the ages of 18 to 35 years old constituting over 50% of registered voters and the largest voting bloc. They are therefore a formidable political force and are increasingly transforming from foot soldiers that are capable of determining the outcome of a governorship election to becoming active participants in the governance process. For example, the youth turnout was the decisive factor in the 2022 governorship election and several members of the current State House of Assembly and State Executive Council are under the age of 40 years with young professionals occupying the position of Senior Special Assistants and Special Assistants in charge of technological innovations and communication.

While precise census data for PwDs is difficult to obtain, based on the World Health Organisation's global estimate that about 15% of any given population typically lives with a disability, it is estimated that over 500,000 persons live with some form of disability in Ekiti state, which is demographically significant. In the survey carried out by TAF Africa, the most prevalent forms of disability in the State are visual and hearing impairment, mobility-related challenges and albinism⁵. Efforts at promoting the participation of PwDs in the political and socio-economic life of the State is demonstrated in the passage of the Ekiti State Discrimination Against Persons with Disabilities (Prohibition) Law of 2020, which establishes the Office Disability Affairs and Board of Inclusion. The law prohibits discrimination and specifies an employment quota of 5% in public organisations for PwDs, compels accessibility to public buildings and seeks to promote awareness on their rights, dignity and capabilities. While the law was a significant legislative milestone for the state, its implementation and enforcement is challenging.

2.4.2 Trends and Gaps

The Ekiti off-cycle election presents a political environment in which gender inclusion and the participation of youths and PwDs in the electoral processes and outcomes are shaped by the dynamics and intricacies of strategic gatekeeping, the awareness to engage and the determination to participate. Emerging evidence from the perception survey conducted by the Nigerian Women Trust Fund indicates a strong political awareness and agency among women in Ekiti State. While 70.6% of women respondents feels confident to express their political views, 64.7% feels safe in participating in political activities and 52.9% believe women are adequately represented in the governance of the State⁶. Despite this demonstration of confidence and engagement among women, they are still constrained by several risk factors, such as safety, access to and presence in decision-making within the political power structures, which continue to hinder their transition from participation to a position of political influence. This suggests that the primary trend in Ekiti is not about if women participate, but whether they can participate meaningfully and safely within the power structures. While women are increasingly successful at the grassroots level, as demonstrated by the fact that in the recent local government elections in the State, at least 56 women reportedly emerged as winners⁷, they are underrepresented in high-level political contests, given that there is no female governorship candidate in the 2026 election. Nevertheless, there has been an uneven progress in the level of women's representation in the State House of Assembly, rising from zero representation in 1999, one in 2003, four in 2011 and six in 2023. In short, Ekiti reflects a dual reality of a state that demonstrates clear progress and potential for women's participation but at the same time exhibits systemic barriers that prevent women from accessing the highest levels of political power.

Ekiti State has a huge concentration of young people as a result of high presence of higher institutions across the State. In fact, there are more than 15 higher education institutions with over 100,000 student enrolment in the various Federal, State, and private Universities, as well as in Polytechnics and Colleges of Education across the State. The huge presence of young people in the State partly explains its seemingly combustible nature, as they constitute a pool of foot soldiers for political actors to carry out negative political activities. This situation is further complicated by the fact that many of the students are not indigenes of the State and therefore may or may not be eligible to vote in the election, and herein lies the problem. As the election is likely to take place during the academic session, the eligible ones are capable of determining the outcome and may do so at a price, while the ineligible ones can become tools in the hands of politicians for sundry activities, including vote trading, thuggery and violence. Given the history of youth restiveness in the State, it is important to pay serious attention to the youth question, especially within the context of the 2024 Ekiti State Citizens Agenda carried out by the Justice Development and Peace Initiative (JDPI), which indicated that youths are more interested in appointment into political offices rather than skill acquisition, bursary or loan for studying.

The findings from the PWDs pre-election survey ahead of the Ekiti state Governorship election conducted by TAF Africa indicate very high political awareness and strong electoral engagement among PwDs in Ekiti State. Furthermore, many of them have a high degree of confidence in the electoral process, with substantial knowledge of INEC's assistive devices. This reflects the effective advocacy outreach by electoral stakeholders to promote inclusion and participation to the PwD community. The findings by TAF Africa also reveals a strong commitment within the community to exercise their franchise in spite of the logistical and accessibility challenges that could hinder effective participation in elections. Some of the identified challenges includes inaccessible polling units, long queues exposing them to harsh weather conditions, fear of violence, transportation difficulties, limited access to assistive voting devices and experiences of stigma or discrimination. Thus, while progress toward inclusive elections is evident, significant gaps in infrastructure, security, and information dissemination continue to undermine full participation. Mitigating these challenges will require a multi-stakeholder collaboration to improve accessibility to polling units, strengthen disability inclusion training for election officials, expand awareness and distribution of assistive devices, enhance security presence and improve transportation support on election day.

6 NWTF (2026) NWTF Ekiti Pre-Election Report

2.4.3 Enhancing Participation

From the foregoing, it is evident that the participation of women, youth, and persons with disabilities in the political and electoral process remains a challenge. This is demonstrated in the under-represented in these groups as candidates for election and in party leadership positions. For example, none of the 12 political parties fielded a female governorship candidate as high nomination fees, informal gatekeeping practices and entrenched patronage networks continue to limit participation. The youth does not fare better as young aspirants without a strong political godfather or substantial financial resources cannot compete effectively within the restrictive candidate nomination process or struggle to leadership positions especially within the major political parties. The participation of PwDs as candidate and party leaders is virtually non-existent as none of the governorship candidate is identified as a person with disability, reflecting continued neglect of disability representation in State and party executive positions signalling a broader failure to mainstream inclusive participation beyond rhetorical commitments. Given that inclusion frameworks are increasingly becoming part of democratic governance benchmarks with implications for electoral credibility and equity, there is the urgent need to create genuine pathways for women, youth and persons with disabilities to overcome their structural exclusion towards full participation in the political system and governance in Ekiti State.

2.5 RISK ANALYSES

2.5.1 Nature of Risks

The risk environment for the 20th June 2026 Ekiti State off-cycle Governorship election is generally low-intensity, characterised by a combination of political, institutional, security and socio-economic vulnerabilities that, if not properly managed, could undermine the integrity, credibility and legitimacy of the electoral process. Overall, the prevailing security situation in the State remains calm and relatively peaceful, with no widespread incidents of organised political violence or activities of armed non-state actors reported in the pre-election period. Although this aligns with the broader perception that the election is likely to be conducted in a largely peaceful atmosphere, beneath this perception of stability lies a set of latent risks rooted in the political economy and historical electoral behaviour of the State. Furthermore, the risk environment is compounded by information-related threats, including the spread of fake news, misinformation, disinformation and hate speech and the mobilisation of primordial sentiments, especially in areas where there are existing communal tensions and conflicts.

Another critical risk factor is the fallout from party primaries and candidate nomination processes across political parties. While aggrieved actors have largely resorted to judicial processes rather than violence, the ongoing litigations and unresolved intra-party grievances create some level of uncertainty that could trigger tensions, particularly if the list of candidates is altered by Court decisions close to the election date. Already, there is a perceived lack of competitiveness in the election, driven by incumbency advantage, elite consensus and weak opposition structures. This has contributed to voter apathy and public disengagement, which could in turn increase the likelihood of vote trading and inducement, particularly in the context of prevailing economic hardship and declining living conditions.

Other identified risks are in relation to public trust in electoral management and security agencies, as perceptions of bias, uneven enforcement of rules, or compromise by electoral officials could provoke strong reactions from the electorate, given the history of politically conscious and responsive citizenry in Ekiti State. In addition, general insecurity, including incidents of cross-border criminal activities such as kidnapping and banditry in some parts of the State, constitutes a contextual risk that may not be directly election-related but could affect voter participation and access, especially in rural and border communities.

In sum, the nature of risks in Ekiti State is largely indirect, localised, and perception-driven, with greater potential to manifest through low voter turnout, vote buying, legitimacy disputes and isolated incidents of tension, rather than widespread electoral violence.

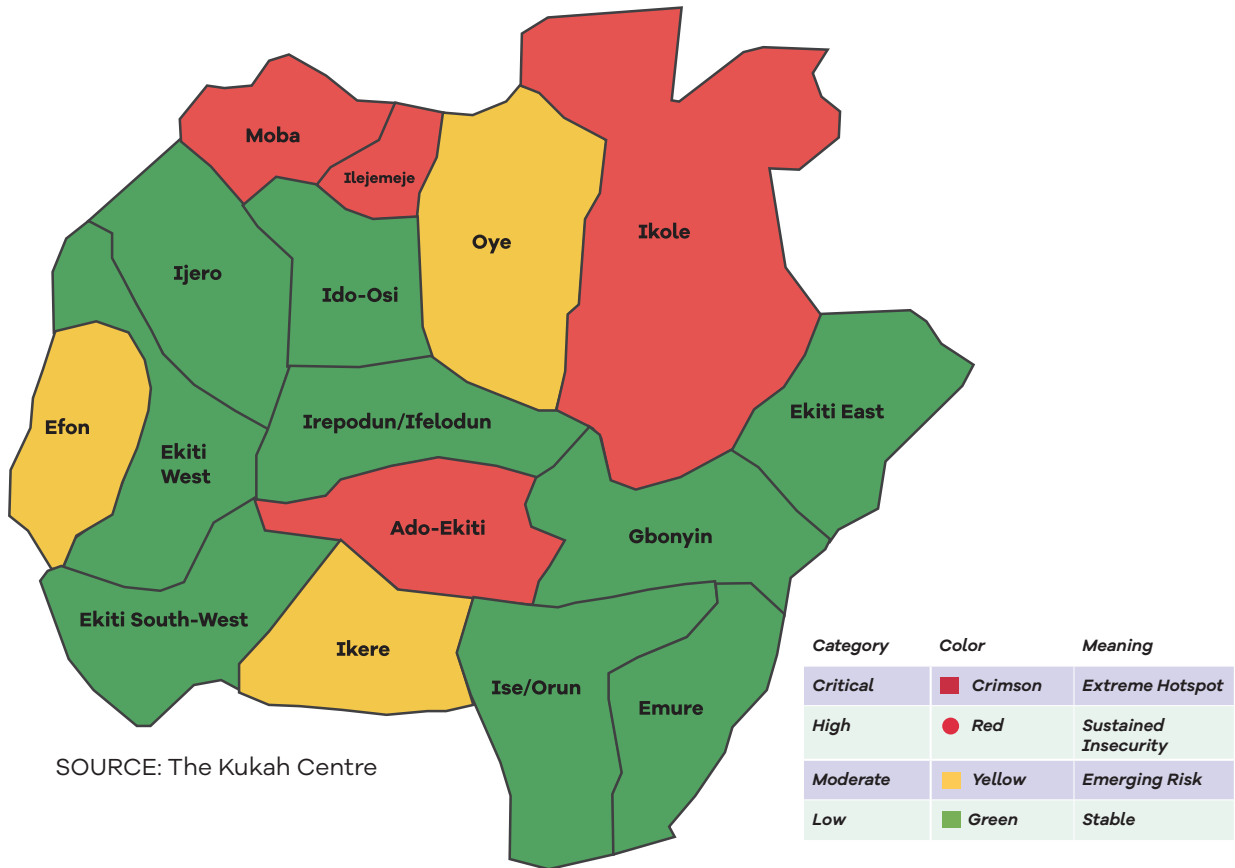

2.5.2 Potential Threats and Flashpoints

Notwithstanding the generally peaceful outlook, several potential threats and flashpoints have been identified that could escalate tensions before, during and after the election. One major threat is the reaction of the electorate to any perceived manipulation of the electoral process. Ekiti voters have historically demonstrated a strong disposition to resist attempts to undermine their mandate. Consequently, logistical failures, delays in the commencement of polls, malfunction of electoral technology (such as BVAS), or irregularities in result collation and transmission could trigger protests, unrest or confrontation at polling and collation centres. The fallout from party primaries and nomination processes also constitutes a significant flashpoint. Although disputes are currently being addressed through the Courts, the unpredictable outcomes of ongoing litigations may alter the political landscape and heighten tensions among party supporters. Political mobilisation around perceived marginalisation, particularly agitation from the Ekiti South Senatorial District for power rotation, presents another potential trigger for identity-based political tension if exploited during campaigns.

The risk mapping of the State by the Kukah Centre shows that Ado-Ekiti and environs with its cosmopolitan nature, are susceptible to social unrest and urban violence, while the Local Government

Areas in the Northern axis of the State, such as Ikole, Moba and Ilejemeje, remain vulnerable to cross-border criminal activities, including assault, kidnapping and armed attacks. These areas could experience reduced voter turnout or disruptions to electoral activities if security concerns are not adequately addressed.

RISK AND THREAT ASSESSMENT FOR THE 2026 GOVERNORSHIP ELECTION

SOURCE: The Kukah Centre

LEGEND

- High Risk: Ado-Ekiti (Urban violence), Ikole, Moba and Ilejemeje (kidnapping (Kidnapping exposure and hotspot).
- Medium Risk: Efon, Ikere (Site of a fatal incident) and Oye (Isolated and lower-impact incidents).
- Low Risk: Ekiti East, Aiyekire (Gboyin), Emure, Ise/Orun, Ekiti South-West, Ekiti West, Ijero, Ido-Osi, Ilejemeje and Irepodun-Ifelodun.

Urban and politically strategic LGAs such as Ado-Ekiti, Ikere, Ijero and Oye may serve as political flashpoints, particularly during campaign rallies, election day voting and result collation due to their population density and political significance.

Other notable threats include:

- i. Vote buying and voter inducement, driven by economic hardship and weak electoral enforcement mechanisms;

- ii. Use of political thugs and intimidation tactics, especially in closely contested polling units;
- iii. Spread of fake news, misinformation and hate speech, particularly through social media and local radio platforms;
- iv. Militarisation and politicisation of election security, including the excessive or biased deployment of security personnel; and
- v. Possible backlash against enforcement actions, such as attempts to curb vote trading through coercive measures. These threats are largely situational and event-driven, with higher likelihood of occurrence during campaign periods, election day operations and post-election result management processes.

2.5.3 Securing the Election

Securing the 2026 Ekiti State Governorship election will require a coordinated, proactive and multi-stakeholder approach, focusing on prevention, confidence-building and rapid response to emerging threats. The Ekiti State Police Command under the leadership of the Police Commissioner Michael Falade who assumed duty on 23rd January 2026, consists of six area commands, 31 divisions, 39 outposts and an anti-bomb squad. The Police, as the lead agency in election security, has already developed an operational framework, Operational Order 08/2026 for the election proposing the deployment of 9,780 conventional policemen, 25 units of mobile policemen, 200 patrol vehicles, 12 Armoured Personnel Carrier and three helicopters to secure the election. This will be complemented by the Nigerian Army from the Force Operational Base in the State and personnel from other security and law enforcement agencies including the Department of State Services, (DSS) National Security and Defence Corps (NSDC), Nigeria Immigration Service, (NIS), Nigerian Correctional Service (NCoS), Federal Road Safety Corps (FRSC), National Drug and Law Enforcement Agency (NDLEA). This provides a strong foundation for ensuring a secure electoral environment, provided that deployment is strategic, intelligence-driven and professionally conducted.

A lot of attention and resources is given to the early identification and mapping of high-risk areas, particularly border communities and politically sensitive LGAs to enable targeted security deployment and surveillance. This would be complemented by effective inter-agency coordination through the Inter-Agency Consultative Committee on Election Security (ICCES) to ensure seamless information sharing and rapid response to incidents. It is important to ensure the neutrality, professionalism and accountability of electoral and security personnel as any perception of bias or excessive use of force could undermine public confidence and escalate tensions. Security operations should therefore be firm operate within the provisions of the code of conduct and rules of engagement for security personnel on electoral duties. The protection of electoral personnel, materials and infrastructure is essential, including securing INEC offices, Registration Area Centres (RACs), polling units and collation centres, as well as ensuring the safe movement of sensitive and non-sensitive materials. In the run up to the election, the Nigeria Police in close cooperation and collaboration with operatives of the Department of State

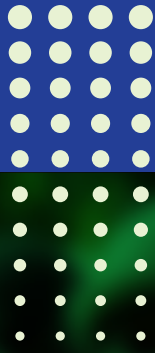

Security and the Army, coordination with the personnel of Ekiti State security network known as Amotekun and Agro Marshalls and with the support of local vigilante groups and hunters is carrying out a bush combing exercise to secure farming communities and flush out criminal elements from the State.

Equally important is the need for INEC to deliver a transparent, efficient and credible electoral process. These includes:

- i. Timely procurement and deployment of all election materials;
- ii. Timely recruitment, training, deployment and payment of the allowances of ad-doc election personnel;
- iii. Proper configuration and efficient functionality of BVAS with the provision of technical support staff to resolve any glitches;
- iv. Transparent collation and transmission of results; and
- v. Effective communication with stakeholders.

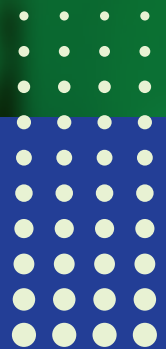

Addressing these operational issues will significantly reduce the risk of disputes and public unrest. Stakeholder engagement remains a critical component of election security. The National Peace Committee, traditional rulers and religious leaders, CSOs and the media should intensify efforts at peace messaging, voter education and conflict de-escalation. Political parties and candidates should be encouraged to commit to peaceful conduct and adherence to electoral laws. Furthermore, there is a need for conflict-sensitive media reporting and proactive management of misinformation, particularly on digital platforms. Regulatory bodies and civil society actors should work collaboratively to monitor and counter harmful narratives. Finally, targeted measures should be implemented to enhance voter confidence and participation, including ensuring safe access to polling units, addressing barriers faced by vulnerable groups such as women, youths and persons with disabilities, and providing adequate voter information.

While the risk of widespread electoral violence in Ekiti State remains low, the election is susceptible to localized disruptions, institutional trust deficits and process-related triggers. The successful conduct of the election will depend largely on the ability of INEC, security agencies and other stakeholders to proactively manage these risks, maintain public confidence and ensure a transparent and inclusive electoral process.

RECOMMENDATIONS

The Ekiti State Governorship election offers an important opportunity to consolidate democratic governance and strengthen electoral integrity ahead of the 2027 General Election. While the overall environment is conducive, the credibility of the process will ultimately be determined not only by the absence of violence, but by the transparency, inclusiveness and public acceptance of the outcome. There is need to take certain proactive measures to address identified risks and sustain stakeholder confidence to ensure a peaceful, free, fair and credible election. All stakeholders, including INEC, the security agencies, political parties, candidates, civil society organisations (CSOs), the media, traditional rulers and religious leaders, have important roles to play in ensuring peaceful and credible elections. This is especially important in promoting and supporting all efforts and initiatives aimed at addressing extant socio-cultural and structural barriers in enhancing the inclusion and participation of all marginalised groups, particularly for women, youths and persons with disabilities in the electoral process.

In order to mitigate identified risks, strengthen public confidence and ensuring the conduct of a peaceful, credible, inclusive and transparent election in Ekiti State, it is recommended as follows:

3.1 INEC

In order to ensure the conduct of a credible, transparent and inclusive election, the Independent National Electoral Commission (INEC) should prioritise the following:

- i. Timely release and effective utilisation of election funds to enable the completion of critical pre-election activities, including the rehabilitation of State and LGA offices and collation centres, preparation of Registration Area Centres (RACs) and logistics arrangements for the deployment of personnel and materials.

- ii. Strengthening operational and logistical preparedness, particularly through the repair and deployment of functional vehicles, timely distribution of sensitive and non-sensitive materials, proper configuration and testing of the Biometric Voter Accreditation System (BVAS) to avoid technical failures on election day and the activation and deployment of the INEC Security and Alert Notification System (ISANS) for rapid response to any incidence of arson, kidnapping or hijacking of election personnel and materials.

- iii. Provide of raincoats for election duty officials and protective cover for all election materials against the inclement raining season weather.

- iv. Upscaling civic and voter education in collaboration with relevant stakeholders to address voter apathy, enhance public understanding of electoral procedures and discourage vote trading.

- v. Ensure transparent and efficient election day processes, including the timely opening of polling units, proper accreditation of voters, and adherence to procedures for collation and transmission of results. Clear and proactive communication with stakeholders will be critical in managing expectations and preventing fake news and misinformation.

vi. Intensification of stakeholder engagement, including more frequent meetings of the Inter-Agency Consultative Committee on Election Security (ICCES), consultations with political parties and engagement with traditional rulers and religious leaders to build trust and confidence in the process.

vii. Take deliberate measures to enhance inclusivity, targeting outreach in rural communities and among marginalised groups such as the provision of assistive materials for persons with disabilities, improved access to polling units and gender-sensitive approaches to electoral management.

viii. Engage in targeted voter education and sensitisation programmes to improve electoral inclusion support measures for marginalised groups by training election officials to implement priority voting for the vulnerable persons, strengthening security at the polling units and making them more accessible, expanding the availability of assistive voting devices for disability communities and improving the collection and dissemination of gender and PwD-disaggregated data for the purpose of planning and advocacy.

3.2 Security and Law Enforcement Agencies

Security and law enforcement agencies play a critical role in safeguarding the electoral process and should undertake the following:

i. Ensure the effective implementation of Operation Order 08/2026, with adequate and strategic deployment of personnel across the State, particularly in identified high-risk and difficult-to-reach areas.

ii. Pursue intelligence-led and risk-based deployment, focusing on border communities and politically sensitive LGAs, to prevent and respond promptly to emerging threats, including criminal activities and potential electoral violence.

iii. Maintain strict neutrality, professionalism and adherence to rules of engagement. Any form of bias, intimidation or excessive use of force should be avoided, as it could undermine public confidence and escalate tensions.

iv. Prioritisation of the protection of electoral personnel, materials and infrastructure, including INEC offices, RACs, polling units and collation centres, as well as ensuring the safety and security of voters and the safe movement of election personnel and materials, election observers, journalists and vulnerable persons wishing to cast their vote.

v. Strengthening of inter-agency coordination through ICCES to facilitate information sharing, joint planning and rapid response to incidents, especially by monitoring the activities of the transport unions engaged by INEC by movement of personnel and materials and the potential use of commercial motorcycle operators and other willing elements as thugs to disrupt the election.

vi. Adopt proportionate and rights-based approach in addressing vote trading and electoral offences, avoiding heavy-handed tactics that could provoke public backlash.

vii. Take proactive engagement with communities, including traditional rulers and religious leaders to support confidence-building and early warning mechanisms.

3.3 Electoral Stakeholders

1) Political Parties and Candidates should:

i. Ensure strict adherence to internal democracy and the provisions of the electoral legal framework, Electoral Act, including transparent management of disputes arising from primaries and candidate nominations.

ii. Commit to issue-based campaigns and refrain from the use of inflammatory rhetoric, hate speech, misinformation or the mobilisation of ethnic, religious or primordial sentiments.

iii. Educate their supporters and party agents to be peaceful and law-abiding in their conduct and behaviour in the pre-election, election and post-election period.

iv. Commit to signing the Peace Accords and publicly pledge their commitment to peaceful, credible, transparent and inclusive elections by refraining from vote buying, voter intimidation, the use of thugs, acceptance of credible outcomes and lawful dispute resolution through appropriate judicial and alternative dispute resolution channels.

2) Civil Society and Community-Based Organisations should:

- i. Intensify voter education, public awareness and peace messaging, particularly targeting youths, women and rural communities to promote active participation in the electoral process.

- ii. Undertake advocacy and targeted sensitisation programmes towards the political engagement among women, youths and PwDs to promote a more inclusive electoral process and outcomes.

- iii. Intensify campaigns for a peaceful, non-violent and issue-based electoral process among voters, especially on the need to sensitise the citizens on the negative and dangerous implications of vote trading and to demand accountability from the political actors.

3) The Media should:

- i. Ensure fair, balanced and conflict-sensitive reporting, providing equitable access to all candidates.

- ii. Strengthen their election preparedness by training themselves on safety and digital security.

- iii. Avoiding the dissemination of unverified information, fake news and disinformation and strengthening fact-checking mechanisms, especially in the digital space, by embedding fact-checkers in the situation room to combat misinformation and disinformation.

- iv. Apply for accreditation from INEC within the timeframe of 8th April to 7th June 2026, get their accreditation and abide by the rules and regulations governing their accreditation to avoid any untoward situation.

- v. Document and report all security incidents and electoral offences and malpractices for potential use by INEC to take disciplinary action against any of its indicted officials, for the purpose of litigation in the Election Tribunal and Courts and for post-election advocacy.

4) Traditional Rulers and Religious Leaders should:

- i. Leverage on their moral authority and influence to promote voter turnout, peaceful coexistence, tolerance and responsible political participation.

- ii. Remain non-partisan and accommodating to all political parties and candidates wishing to pay a courtesy visit, and especially for the purpose of alternate dispute resolution.

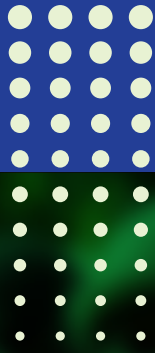

- iii. Avoid inciting communal clashes and religious conflict in their jurisdictions that are capable of jeopardising the election.

- iv. Discourage electoral malpractice by condemning electoral malpractices, especially vote trading and provide information and early warning to INEC and the security and law enforcement agencies on real and potential threats to the election in their domain.

3.4 Election Observers

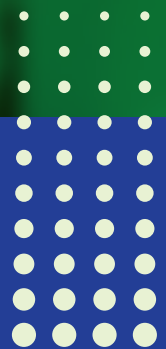

Election observers should adopt proactive and coordinated approaches to support electoral integrity by early deployment, extensive and well-coordinated observation missions with adequate coverage of both urban and rural areas, including identified high-risk locations. They should focus on:

- i. Ensure registration for accreditation within the stipulated timeframe by INEC, get their accreditation by collecting the required identification card, provide adequate training for the observers and deploy them strategically across the State.
- ii. Provide their official with adequate training to systematically observe key aspects of the electoral process, including pre-election environment, campaign activities, election day procedures, collation and results management.
- iii. Cooperate, collaborate and coordinate their actions and activities to optimise their resources for a more strategic and wider deployment of personnel across the State.
- iv. Strengthen early warning and incident reporting mechanisms, working collaboratively with other stakeholders to identify and flag potential risks in a timely manner.
- v. Engage in evidence-based reporting, providing objective and credible assessments that can enhance public confidence and inform stakeholders.
- vi. Prioritise inclusivity in observation, ensuring that the experiences of women, youths and persons with disabilities are adequately captured and reflected in their reports.
- vii. Apply for and obtain their accreditation on or before the deadline of 6th April 2026, maintain constructive engagement with INEC, security agencies and other stakeholders by adhering to the rules and regulations governing their accreditation and uphold the principles of non-partisanship, neutrality and independence to avoid any unpleasant situation and provide timely feedback and recommendations to improve electoral processes.

CONCLUSION

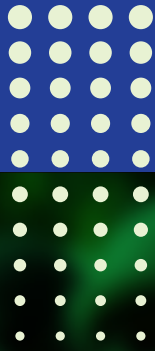

The pre-election environment in Ekiti State ahead of the 20th June 2026 off-cycle Governorship election presents a generally calm and stable outlook, with no immediate indicators of widespread electoral violence or systemic breakdown of law and order. This positive trajectory is reinforced by the relative peace in the State, the absence of activities by armed non-state actors and the ongoing efforts of key stakeholders to promote civic engagement, peaceful participation and adherence to democratic norms. However, this stability is qualified by underlying structural and contextual vulnerabilities that could affect the integrity, credibility and legitimacy of the electoral process if not adequately managed. First is the perceived lack of electoral competitiveness, internal crises within political parties, ongoing litigations arising from candidate nominations, and public disaffection driven by socio-economic challenges. These factors have contributed to voter apathy and may increase the susceptibility of the electorate to vote trading and other forms of electoral inducement.

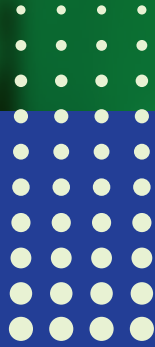

While the preparedness of the Independent National Electoral Commission (INEC) in the State, particularly in terms of experienced personnel and ongoing logistical arrangements, provides a reasonable basis for the conduct of the election, there are critical gaps in relation to early funding, infrastructure, operational logistics and the scale of voter education and stakeholder engagement. The media landscape, while vibrant and far-reaching, also presents a dual-edged dynamic, serving as both a platform for voter education and democratic discourse and a potential channel for the dissemination of misinformation, disinformation and polarising narratives. Similarly, while there is a visible effort to enhance the participation of women, youths and persons with disabilities, structural barriers and socio-cultural constraints continue to limit their full inclusion in the electoral process. Addressing these gaps in a timely manner will be essential to ensuring a smooth and credible electoral process.

Importantly, the risk assessment indicates that while the likelihood of any large-scale violence is low, the election remains vulnerable to localised disruptions, particularly those arising from logistical failures, perceived manipulation of the process, security lapses and inflammatory political or media activities. The historically high level of political awareness among the electorate in Ekiti State means that any perceived compromise of the process could trigger a strong public reaction and undermine confidence in the outcome.

Conclusively, the successful conduct of the election will depend on the ability of all stakeholders, including INEC, security agencies, political parties, the media, civil society organisations, as well as traditional rulers and religious leaders and eligible voters and all citizens to act in a coordinated, transparent and accountable manner. This includes ensuring strict adherence to the legal framework, maintaining neutrality and professionalism, strengthening voter education and public communication and implementing effective conflict prevention and mitigation strategies.
